

CHRISTMAS AT THE WHITE HOUSE

(INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—With wreaths of evergreen and poinsettias suspended from the windows today the White House took on its annual holiday appearance.

There will be no Christmas tree at the White House this year. The President and Mrs. Wilson will observe the day in a very quiet manner, their plans including a quiet family dinner and a long motor ride into the surrounding country. The president's grandchildren, the little McAdams and Sayres, will spend their Christmas at their homes. Mr. and Mrs. McAdams and Prof. and Mrs. Sayre will be guests at the White House shortly after Christmas. Miss Margaret Wilson will be the only White House guest of the president.

On Christmas eve the president will indulge in his annual custom of making gifts of turkeys to the employees at the White House. About 150 turkeys will be distributed in this manner, each married employee and each policeman about the house and grounds participating.

The president's plans do not include his attendance at church, and only the members of Mrs. Wilson's family will be received during the day. It is probable that the president and Mrs. Wilson will take their drive into the country on Christmas morning, reviving their annual custom of distributing gifts to the children along the route of Mr. Wilson's daily motor rides. Mrs. Wilson played Santa Claus alone last year because of the president's critical illness.
